

Lost Found Art / By Mark and Joy Indursky / www.lostfoundart.com/

These unique collections of patinaed vintage and antique objects bring out the eclectic character and rich subtleties of everyday miscellany we tend to pass over in the hustle and bustle of daily life.

Mark and Joy Indursky are the names behind this anomalous and quirky design company. Eschewing bright and shiny newness for oxidation and cracked paint, the duo seek out folk art and industrial-designed pieces and display them in unique ways. These sculptural presentations can be installed in either commercial or residential environments, and are curated with special attention to scale, color, surface, and graphic appeal. Be it an assemblage of vintage ray guns, Art Deco microphones, or baseball mitts, these one-off creations are the perfect antidote to the ubiquity of mass-produced mediocrity.
